YOU ARE WHAT YOU ATE

What do 70 years worth of SU alumni all remember? The inspiring grandeur of the Hall of Languages? Golden fall afternoons on the Quad? The sonorous chimes of Crouse College? Forget it. Let's go right to the heart—or at least the stomach—of it.

Food, glorious food! And not the meals all students can find in SU dining centers. We're talking about the real stuff.

Pizza. Wings. Toasted honey buns. Philadelphia cheese-steak sandwiches. And where did we find these delights? From those two venerable institutions that have been around so long they're virtually synonymous with a Syracuse education.

You got it. The Varsity and Cosmo's. How those romantic names conjure up memories!

Of course that 20-cent slice is gonna cost you a buck at Cosmo's today, and 12 wings at the Varsity now go for $3.25 instead of $2. But hey, what hasn't gone up?

O The Varsity is probably the older of the two, having been opened in 1925 as the College Candy Shop by Jerry Dellas. In those days it served what today would be considered gourmet food: boneless breast of veal, homemade beef stew, chicken fricassee.

R The Dellas family lived upstairs over the restaurant, and all four sons worked there as kids, squeezing orange juice and peeling potatoes before going off to grade school on Madison Street. Later, they worked a couple of hours in the evening.

A As adults, three of them—John '52, Spud '46, and Ted—continued in the business. Since Spud's death, Ted and John have kept on trucking, overseeing the busiest hours of business in the cool, dim, sports-festooned establishment.

N "I don't know why we've lasted so long," Ted admits. "Maybe we're too dumb to do anything else. But it's probably because the family still puts in the hours and makes sure things go right."

The campus restaurant business obviously runs in the family's blood. The third generation of Dellases—John '77 and Jerry—own Faegan's Cafe & Pub as well as the Olive and the Orange, both within pizza-tossing distance of the Varsity. They have their own alumni devotees from more recent years.

Things have changed over 70 years. If you graduated in the thirties, you still hunger for Varsity sundaes: hot fudge, banana split, the Virginia special. Table service was dropped for cafeteria-style in 1954. Pizza appeared in the front window around 1975, an instant hit.

Now let us take a moment to pay homage to the Varsity's wings, a creation of the early eighties.

They're lightly fried but pure, without thick bread-ing to disguise their elegance. Then they're smothered in the Varsity's own secret Buffalo-style sauce—tangy but not ridiculously spicy. You can eat them without sauce running down your chin, but it takes practice.

The Dellas family obviously loves serving good food and watching people enjoy it. But that's not the whole story.

"The best thing about running this place is dealing with young people," says Ted. "I wouldn't trade it for anything."

The actual launching of Cosmo's by the Pappas brothers is, one might say, shrouded in antiquity; no one quite remembers when it happened. But all agree it was in the mid-twenties, probably shortly after the Varsity was born.

Of course, the place has shifted around a bit. Cosmo's started kitty-corner from the Varsity but moved down the block to a spot on Marshall Street once occupied by the Dutch Haven (Now there's another zinger from the fifties!) in 1963.

When you walk in today, the first person you see is a vigorous, gray-haired guy slinging pizza dough around. Meet Cosmo's current owner, George Cannellos '47, who worked as a dishwasher for the Pappas brothers when he was a youngster. Years later, Cannellos came back to work making pizza dough and eventually bought the restaurant with partner Demo Stathis Sr. Today, Stathis' son, Demo Jr., is Cannellos' partner.

"We keep adding things to make a bigger menu," Cannellos says. "You have to get with the times. Besides sandwiches, we do a big job with chicken, spaghetti, and salads."

But the pizza—ah, the pizza! Greek-style, it's chewier than Neapolitan but not too doughy, with an adequate but not overwhelming amount of cheese. On top of the distinctive sweet, tomatoey sauce, you can get vegetarian or garlic toppings if you like the new-fangled styles. But the purists still go for pepperoni; that's Cosmo's number one seller.

Once again, the secret of longevity seems to be management. "When partners work, things go right," Cannellos says. "Other restaurants come and go and owners complain they can't get good help. But we use the same students they do, so it must be because we're up here running things."

Perhaps the hair is a bit grayer, but Ted Dellas of the Varsity is the same friendly presence in his restaurant that he's always been. And isn't it nice that the inside decor, featuring SU sports victories, hasn't changed a bit either.

In actuality, Cosmo's owner George Cannellos '47 seldom has enough free time to relax leaning against the counter. Alumni remember him as the best pizza dough tosser in the city, and when he's not doing that, he's elbow deep in something.

Today Cannellos says he's semi-retired, which means he works only 50 to 60 hours a week. "Listen, this is the greatest," he confides. "I love being up here. You meet the greatest people and they keep coming back to see you. Where else could you have that?"

So, if you've got a little time during Homecoming Weekend, stroll down to Marshall Street and have a snack. A few wings, a couple of slices—what could it hurt? And what memories it will bring back! ■

HOMECOMING WEEKEND OCTOBER 6-8

You asked for it, you've got it! This year, Homecoming features mini-reunions of many special-interest groups whose members worked and played together in their student days. While campus teems with activities to be shared by everyone, we hope you'll find something entertaining in one of these smaller club get-togethers.

If we've left your group out and you'd like to help organize a mini-reunion either for this year or in the future, contact the Office of Alumni Relations at 1-800-SUALUMS (1-800-782-5867) or 315-443-3516.

ALL WEEKEND Office of Alumni Relations Hospitality Tables.

Schine Student Center and Sheraton University Hotel. Stop here first to pick up your name-tag, which gives you a 10-percent discount at the SU Bookstore and Schine Dining. When you stop in, your name goes into a drawing for a $100 gift certificate from the SU Bookstore. We'll give you a complete program booklet with the times and locations of all events so you can plan your weekend.

Football Game Tickets.

If you haven't already done so, order your tickets for the Temple game directly from the Carrier Dome. Call 315-443-2121, or 1-800-273-7027.

FRIDAY ACTIVITIES

50 Years in Hendricks Chapel: A Retrospective of Jewish Student Life. Come see yourself (or your friends) as you looked 10, 20, even 50 years ago. This Hillel exhibition of photographs, newspapers, posters, and concert programs spans five decades of Jewish activity at SU, culled from the personal collections of alumni and JSF (Jewish Student Fellowship, the forerunner of Hillel Foundation), and Hillel archives.

Did you sing in the choir? Serve on the executive board? Write for the newspaper? Organize vigils or dinner dances? Eat latkes with your friends? You'll see all those memorable moments. Noble Room, Hendricks Chapel. Friday, 9 a.m.-8 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m.-noon; Sunday, 9 a.m.-5 p.m. For more information, contact Rabbi Toby Manewith at Hillel at 315-443-5042.

School of Management.

Together with the American Society for Quality Control, the school presents a special one-day conference on the latest developments in quality management. Hear representatives from Xerox, RIT, Coopers & Lybrand, Strong Memorial Hospital, and Trident Tool. ## HOMECOMING AWARD WINNERS

During Homecoming Weekend, October 6-8, several people will receive awards for outstanding service to the University. Outstanding Alumni Awards will be presented to Charles A. Chappell Jr. '49, James P. Fox G'62, and Sandra K. Townes G'76. The Outstanding Young Alumni Award will be given to Tim Green '86, G'94. The Outstanding Teacher Award will go to Mark Rupert, an associate professor of political science in the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs.

Charles A. Chappell Jr. of Syracuse is the former chairman of the board of C.E. Chappell & Sons, a chain of Central New York department stores for nearly 100 years before another company acquired it. Chappell serves on dozens of boards and committees in the community and devotes himself to charitable causes. Members of the Student Alumni Association recently presented him with an award for his service. Chappell is an honorary member of the SU Alumni Association Board of Directors, having served many years as a voting member.

James P. Fox of Norristown, Pennsylvania, is a partner at the law firm of Fox & Fox. He made a significant difference in energizing the Philadelphia alumni club, holding meetings in his home and working with local officers to provide support for what has become a very successful club. He also established an annual SU book award at an area high school. Fox is an honorary member of the SU Alumni Association Board of Directors, having served many years as a voting member.

The Honorable Sandra K. Townes is a Syracuse City Court judge. Elected in 1987, she was the first African American woman in Syracuse to hold a judgeship. After completing her law degree at Syracuse, she joined the local district attorney's office and during her tenure helped create the Fraud and Child Support Unit, directed the Career Criminal and Domestic Violence units, and coordinated the Child Sexual Abuse Prosecution Program. Townes is active in community affairs and also spends time at the University, teaching trial practice, serving as judge and evaluator for mock trial competitions, and participating in the Alumni Student Advisor Program. She currently serves on the SU Alumni Association Board of Directors.

Tim Green of Skaneateles played professional football for the Atlanta Falcons for eight years. Today, he's a football broadcast analyst for the Fox television network. While still playing football, Green wrote columns for the Syracuse Herald-Journal. After leaving the NFL, Green earned a law degree from SU and delivered sports commentaries on National Public Radio. He has written two novels, Ruffians and Titans. He serves on the Public Broadcasting Council of Central New York.

Associate Professor Mark Rupert teaches in the political science department of the Maxwell School and also teaches the honors section of international relations. He uses special teaching techniques to encourage critical thinking, such as having students keep weekly journals that incorporate lists of questions to be discussed in class. Besides traditional lectures and discussion groups, he brings guest lecturers to class, shows films, and even plays games like "Risk" in class to foster greater understanding of real problems faced by foreign policy planners. Rupert is widely known for the amount of advising and professional assistance he gives students outside the classroom.

NOTES

GETTING YOUR NEWS INTO CLASS NOTES

We are delighted to receive news of alumni accomplishments, marriages, and children's births. You can either write us a note yourself, or have your employer send a press release. We'll also print your photograph if you send one. Notices of deaths should be accompanied by a copy of an obituary or memorial card.

Once we receive your news, we distribute it to several departments. Since Orange Peal is only published every three months, it can take as long as six months before the item appears.

We do not take information over the telephone. Send news to: Carol North Schmuckler, Editor; Orange Peal; 820 Comstock Avenue, Room 308; Syracuse, NY 13244-5040; fax 315-443-9305.

ORANGE GROVE

Rochester Programs Busy Year

"We ended our year on a high note with our annual sports night," says Beverly Barr Vaughan '54, immediate past president of the Rochester alumni club. "Some 130 people turned out to honor both University and area coaches and to pay tribute to Frank Schantz '32."

Basketball coach Jim Boeheim amused the crowd with stories about receiving unsolicited advice from 20,000 people. Lacrosse coach Roy Simmons Jr. proudly displayed the team's recent championship trophy and spoke of their coming trip to Wales and Lockerbie, Scotland.

The club annually spotlights a local alumnus for contributions to the University and the community, and this year it conferred the honor on Frank Schantz, who recently celebrated his 90th birthday. Schantz and his wife, Kay Halleck Schantz '31, met at SU, where Schantz was a championship wrestler. He became a home builder shortly after World War II and served as president of the Rochester Builders Association.

"We also gave a ton of door prizes, which is always popular," Vaughan says. "Alumni donated items from Kodak cameras to sports paraphernalia. The University gave us so many copies of the new lacrosse poster that everyone who hadn't already won a prize got one, and Roy Simmons made them even more special by staying long after the event to autograph them."

According to Vaughan, the Rochester club probably began sometime in the thirties. "We used to have separate groups for men and women. My father, Culver Barr, led the men's club in the forties and my mother, Clara Williams Barr, was president of the women's group in 1950. I believe the clubs merged around 1955."

With a membership that runs between 250 and 300, the club sponsors activities that appeal to various groups. Last year, events included a private tour of the George Eastman House, trips to football and basketball games on campus, academic lectures by SU speakers, and a wine-tasting evening. In addition, members represented SU at college nights.

Every year, the club gives several area SU seniors $1,000 each toward their tuition. Seven students received the awards this year.

"We celebrated the University's 125th anniversary in March by providing entertainment at a local nursing home," says Vaughan. "Television reporter Rebecca Johnson LeClair '86 acted as emcee. We gave SU visors to the residents and brought a portable organ for a sing-along. We even served orange punch and orange frosted cookies. We honored resident Edna Greutker Donovan '30."

The club also chose four local nonprofit organizations to receive gifts of $125 each, to be used at their discretion. Recipients included three schools and a Puerto Rican youth development group.

Kansas City Club One of Youngest

Chancellor Kenneth A. Shaw and Mary Ann Shaw highlighted a major event for the Kansas City, Missouri, club when they attended a summer meeting at the NCAA Visitors Center in Kansas City.

"We're only a year old," explains president Joyce Roberts Kauffman '62. "Everyone was eager to meet the Shaws and hear what's happening at the University."

According to Kauffman, the Shaws made it a point to chat with everyone who attended, a group that included alumni and current students and their parents. Later, the Chancellor spoke about recent developments on campus and fielded questions ranging from the University's construction plans to worries about tuition and financial aid.

Kauffman, who grew up in Syracuse, admits that she dreamed about having a local alumni club for many years. "Another friend who attended the University and I used to sit around and talk about it. I've lived here for 18 years and still miss the Northeast and thought perhaps other people did, too. When we did get organized, we discovered many of our members were also transplanted Northeasterners who shared our feelings."

The club, which numbers almost 30, kicked off its first year with a New Student Send-Off last summer. During the year, people gathered to watch football and basketball games and also attended a holiday party. This year's Student Send-Off was also well attended.

"We try to schedule a few events that appeal to a large number of people rather than many events for small, special interest groups," says Kauffman. "So far, it's working."

Binghamton Club Revitalized

The alumni club in Binghamton, New York, is experiencing a resurgence. According to president Dick Marko '66, the club has been in existence for many years. In fact, he served as activities chairman in the sixties. "People seemed to lose interest," Marko says, "until about eight years ago when I heard they were reactivating the group. Somehow, I found myself president."

At the club's annual meeting in June, the featured speaker was football coach Paul Pasqualoni. "It was wonderful hearing him talk about the players and what we could expect of them."

With about 100 members, club leaders schedule programming to attract maximum attendance. "We always have a good turnout for our Student Send-Off in the summer," says Marko. "In addition, we schedule several events to watch SU sporting events together."

Everyone in the local club is looking forward to the Fall Fest weekend. Fall Fest traditionally features several alumni clubs from across the Northeast that get together to participate in an activity.

"This year, we're going to spend the weekend at the Pines, a resort in the Catskills," Marko says. "Then, we'll bus down to the SU-Rutgers football game to join 12 other alumni clubs, and stage what we're calling the biggest tailgate party ever. It should be a great weekend and will really kick off our fall season." ■

CAMPUS LIFE CHANGES

by Lois Finkelstein Hoffman '63
English Teacher, North Bellmore, New York

My daughter completed her freshman year at Syracuse University exactly 30 years after my own graduation from the College of Arts and Sciences. Numerous trips to and from the campus, necessitated by moving in, moving out, and Parents Weekend, gave me a glorious opportunity to revisit the scenes of my youth and to relish a thousand happy memories. These visits also showed me how dramatically the life of a young woman at Syracuse had changed.

As I watch my daughter pack the jeans that are the backbone of her wardrobe, I recall how we were not allowed to walk across the Quad wearing slacks. Her phone calls contain the now familiar sentence, "You don't want to know what time I got in last night." What does she know of curfews: 9:15 p.m. from Monday to Thursday, 12:30 a.m. and 1:30 a.m. on weekends? How could I ever explain "late minutes" or "special two o'clocks?"

One pay phone at the end of the hall? Who could live that way in the nineties? Her room is equipped with a phone and an answering machine. The Dingleman is now a food court. Schine Student Center was something we only fantasized about. What can you tell a young woman of today about cheering for the Orangemen in an outdoor stadium while exposing ourselves (and our hair) to whatever weather Syracuse was offering at the moment?

The raciest thing that occurred was a panty raid, with what seemed an endless herd of men racing down Comstock Avenue shouting, "We want silk!" Our housemother exhorted us to get away from our windows in the Alpha Sigma Tau sorority house, lest our characters be somehow corrupted. She was also quite adept at closing the front door on a date's foot (or any part of his anatomy that happened to be in the house) after curfew.

Co-ed dorms? Men and women on the same floor? Unthinkable. "Going out" meant being taken to a movie or restaurant, not monogamous commitment. Necking at the Thornden Park water tower was our idea of sex.

Were we unhappy as we froze in our skirts and rushed to make curfew? Was it less fun to live with same-sex friends in the residence halls? Did we feel encumbered, limited, unliberated? I don't think so. When I left Syracuse with my parents after graduation, I cried all the way down the Thruway, realizing that no other time in my life would be quite the same. Would I want to relive it in the nineties? I'm not so sure. ■
